Scoring Offers on whatever is on your kids' wishlist November 28, 2012 Getty Images Score deals on what's on your child's wish list 1 of 7 Get gifts for less likely are the kids in your life (your real kids as well as how outspiced you're married to) have already made it clear which games and gadgets you're you want this holiday. And you, of course, want to grant your wish lists – without spending much. With some planning, you can. Make a check out these smart ways to save on toys that will make them smile wider. 2 of 7 Collecting supermarket and rewards pharmacy chains are not the only stores with loyalty programs. Members of R Us's Rewards R Us toys get discounts on the membership-only shopping site and other money-saving benefits during the holiday season. Lego's VIP program uses a points system that gives you $5 off for every 100 points you earn. 3 of 7 Get gift cards at a discount check out GiftCardGranny.com, which sells cards for toy and electronics retailers like Target, Toys R Us, Sears, Walmart, Apple, Best Buy and GameStop, averaging 15%. 4 of 7 Come armed with pricing information if you know what competitors of a store are charging, you can get the best bargains without having to drive around the city. Many stores will offer to price match when you show them that you found the cheapest items elsewhere, says consumer savings expert Andrea Woroch, who works with Kinoli, a company that manages GiftCardGranny.com and other online savings sites. To give this store its business, you may even be able to negotiate a better deal, he says. Bring what you want other stores to show: an ad or a printed offer from a website. If you have a smartphone, download RedLaser, a barcode scanning app, which gives you instant price controls. Online, Shopzilla.com has toy price comparisons, and Toys R Us, Target and others put up their annual catalogs this month, so you can compare prices. 5 of 7 Visit Toy-Maker Sites You can pay to go directly to the manufacturers. Xbox.com, for example, has packages now through Christmas that include free games and a month-long subscription to Xbox LIVE Gold, which gives you access to movies and TV shows. LeapFrog.com offers packages and deals during the holidays (leapstergs and LeapPad2 are hot this season). MelissaandDoug.com list of twenty fabulous $9.99 holiday gift suggestions. 6 of 7 Look for sneaky savings spots keep your eyes open for dough coupons where you'd least expect them. In years gone by, Hasbro included coupons in some supermarket circulars of Sunday newspapers. This year, Fisher-Price is leaving 65,000 copies of its Joy Shopping Guide at select zoos and Life Time fitness centers nationwide. The guide includes $5-off coupons for a $25 in-store purchase and free shipping when you spend $50 on Fisher-PriceStore.com. 7 of 7 Buy Now, Adjust Later Just Saw That Fijit Friend of his niece wants ... Should you take it now? Before doing so, check the store's policy in honor of future sales, Woroch suggests. Many stores are discounted anywhere from 10% to 50% Thanksgiving through Christmas. If you pay full price, hold on to your receipt and ask for a price adjustment, in case you see the price drop during a big sale, he advises. It is likely that the essential elements Fly off the shelves, though, so if you're sure you want it, buy it now and adjust later if possible. Below you pay to buy specialty insurance?
